

Review of: "Healthcare Systems Moving Toward Data Governance-Centered Model: India's G20 Presidency in the Wake of COVID"

Dr Shahnawaz Ahmad Wani¹

¹ Jamia Millia Islamia

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article, "Healthcare System Moving Towards a Data Governance-Centered Model: India's G20 Presidency in the Wake of the COVID-19 ," should be retitled to focus specifically on the COVID-19 pandemic.

Further comments.

1. However, the date and time of the webpage search are not provided.
2. According to Dar, M.A., and Wani, S.A. (ABR15, 125–140, 2023, DOI: 10.1007/s41649-022-00227-0), India has encountered challenges in managing COVID-19 pandemic data and personal privacy. This raises a critical question: What measures should India adopt to preserve data privacy? Maintaining impartiality in research is imperative, as bias can compromise the integrity of the study. So, the author should cite this research in bibliography.
3. Additionally, the author should consider including a paragraph on access to healthcare policy in India. It is essential to discuss how to encourage or develop a detailed policy that enables high-tech private hospitals to provide online health care support to doctors working in rural or far-flung areas.
4. There is a valid concern raised by some experts regarding the Ayushman Bharat scheme, which is the largest health insurance scheme in India. The concern is that patient data collected by insurance agencies might be used to determine insurance term policies in the future. This could potentially lead to individuals being compelled to purchase insurance schemes based on their disease status. Given the author's emphasis on the digitalization of health records, it is essential to address this concern within the article and explore potential safeguards or regulations to protect individuals from such practices.

Bibliography: Dar, M.A., and Wani, S.A. (2023). "COVID-19, Personal Data Protection and Privacy in India." ABR15, 125–140. DOI: 10.1007/s41649-022-00227-0