Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. The information flow between sections and paragraphs of each section needs attention.
2. Some sentences are long and may benefit from breaking down for better readability.
3. The abstract is too long. It could benefit from a more concise summary of the paper's focus and contributions.
4. Section 3 is extensive, potentially overwhelming the reader with details. Consider summarizing some findings for brevity.
5. Many repetitions such as the correlation between features and diabetes and the concepts of Aristotle's philosophy. A brief mention could suffice.

In summary, authors need to improve the readability, balance between the length and details, and make a clear transition between different sections and topics.
