

Review of: "Attitude towards business activity risk: evidence using logit models for two groups of OECD countries"

Dario Antonino Musolino¹

¹ Bocconi University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I think that this a good work. It is based on a wide and relevant literature. The literature analysis conducted in par. 1 is well done, as it frames very well the gap filled by this contribution. The methodology and the data, based on the GEM dataset, are robust and appropriate. I have also appreciated the presentation of the results and the discussion. Although the environment can affect entrepreneurs differently , depending on the country, it is also true that the profiles of entrepreneurs are more or less the same throughout the world. This is an important conclusion drawn by this study, which consequently emphasizes the importance of all the activities which can “strengthens the entrepreneurial spirit of a person”.