The author presented the manuscript in a well-planned way. The title "The Correlation between Poverty and Crime in Pakistan" matches perfectly with the literature and discussion of the paper. However, there are some areas that should be considered. The abstract and introduction parts look good. The literature review section of the manuscript could be more detailed, and a bit more information can be easily incorporated. Some figures and tables are required essentially to depict the work in a more precise way. Some sophisticated statistical analysis can easily be added here. In summary, it is a good piece of work, and some extra time will make it even better.
