

Review of: "Climate Change and Sustainability: A Comparative Case Study"

Anam Azam

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Reviewers' comments:

Title: Climate Change and Sustainability: A Comparative Case Study

This article presents a comparative case study examining the approaches to climate change and sustainability in Sweden and India. The paper is not well-written and presented in an appropriate way. Also, the novelty of the paper is not clear.

The reviewer has several concerns:

1. The abstract is not written well and should be rewritten, since half of the abstract is just dealing with the general introduction. Abstract should be standalone and should comprised of a critical problem under 1 or 2 sentences, followed by describing the brief methodology employed with the key results, findings and conclusions. Further, it could also be end up with the plausible application of the research carried out. Therefore, the authors are requested to rewrite the whole abstract.
2. The problem is not clearly stated. The formulation includes some tests but is not clearly stated and need more explanations.
3. The writing and presentation of the paper are poor. Please read the paper carefully and improve it.
4. Please add all the references in the text. Please improve your references style according to journal.
5. I highly recommend you to write conclusion in one paragraph of both countries and make comparison after the case studies.