

Review of: "Creating Sustainable and Outstanding Institutional Culture in Engineering Education in India to Develop High-Performing Institutions"

Himanshu Pawar

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article does not elaborate and shed light upon different aspects of organization culture. Literature is lacking in terms of in-depth exploration of this issue in the Indian context and the article does not review enough literature on sustainable organizations and high performing Institutions. The methodology is merely descriptive in nature, the author should churn out some variables of organizational culture and see their effect on high performing institutions via hypothesis testing at least. The research feels more like a report since, lots of bullet points are used which and vague statements and explanations are given while explaining the results from such a huge survey. The author is required to re visit the literature and work upon the survey conducted and generate actionable recommendations and insights from the survey.