The research paper takes an interesting topic and shows equally interesting results. However, satisfaction as a topic requires a deeper analysis that either captures many more variables (for e.g., what are the living and social conditions of these children?) or is able to contribute a qualitative aspect of research. Such deeper analysis allows consumers of research to understand the why of the results. Apart from this aspect, the study needs a more rigorous academic analysis of existing literature both in the introduction to justify why this was a compelling topic and also in the discussion to reflect how it has contributed to the existing ecosystem.
