The article proposes to analyze the dimensions that eGovernment should include, proposing to incorporate aspects that have already been incorporated by various authors (such as transparency, citizen participation...). He arrives at a definition that does not raise anything new. It would make more sense to approach the subject as a state of the art where already existing frameworks and their dimensions are compared. On the other hand, in literature reviews, articles from the last 5 years are usually considered. In the work references there are no articles from 2020 to 2023. However, previous years there are articles that show that the dimensions that the author wants to incorporate were already considered. In case the author is interested in an article from 2009 where aspects raised in this article were already taken into account:

Rodríguez, R. A., Estévez, E. C., Giulianelli, D. A., & Vera, P. M. (2009). Assessing e-governance maturity through municipal websites—measurement framework and survey results. In XV Congreso Argentino de Ciencias de la Computación.
