

Review of: "Enhancing Cocoa Crop Resilience in Ghana: The Application of Convolutional Neural Networks for Early Detection of Disease and Pest Infestations"

Aurelia Sole¹

¹ Basilicata University Potenza

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The work is very interesting and useful not only for cocoa cultivation but could also be applicable to other types of plantations.

Unfortunately, the work does not provide graphic comparisons between measured data and data evaluated via the network to appreciate the quality of the application, reliability, and error.

It would be useful to have this comparison.