Thank you for asking me to review this manuscript. The study has the potential to add to the body of knowledge about students' use of social media and could have an impact on the literature in the field. However, I also feel that it contains a number of important concerns. The most important problem is that it is NOT a literature review, but at best a presentation of topical areas that deserve investigation. The authors should explain why they have identified these areas and not others, and support their choices with appropriate studies. One minor point: the references to statistics on TikTok use are not updated (they use data from 2020), while a number of important features have been added since then. There is a lot of repetition in the introduction, reporting the same data several times.
