

Review of: "Factors Affecting Economic Crisis in Ethiopia: A Literature Review"

Nenavath Sreenu¹

¹ Maulana Azad National Institute of Technology, Bhopal

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The literature review is notably superficial and lacks depth. The analysis does not delve into a comprehensive exploration of existing studies, theories, or frameworks related to economic crises in Ethiopia. A more exhaustive review would contribute to a more robust understanding of the factors influencing economic crises.

The majority of the references seem outdated, with few recent publications included. Given the dynamic nature of economic conditions, it is essential to incorporate the latest research to ensure the relevance and accuracy of the literature review. The absence of recent sources raises questions about the paper's currency and applicability.

The methodology employed to conduct the literature review is not transparently presented. Readers are left without a clear understanding of the criteria for selecting and evaluating the literature. Providing details on the search strategy and inclusion/exclusion criteria would enhance the paper's credibility.

The literature review contains an abundance of general information about Ethiopia's economic conditions, but it falls short in terms of critically analyzing the factors contributing to economic crises. The focus should shift from broad overviews to a more analytical approach that identifies patterns, contradictions, and gaps in the existing literature.

The organization of the literature review is inconsistent, making it challenging for readers to follow the logical flow of ideas. The paper would benefit from a clear and structured presentation of the reviewed literature, possibly categorized by themes or factors influencing economic crises.

The literature review lacks a synthesis of findings from various studies. A more integrative approach that connects the dots between different sources and highlights overarching themes or patterns would significantly enhance the paper's analytical depth.

The literature review does not effectively establish a clear research gap or identify areas where further investigation is needed. A robust literature review should set the stage for the study's objectives, and this paper falls short in this regard.

Considering the mentioned concerns, a thorough revision is necessary to improve the literature review's depth, currency, organization, and analytical rigor. Addressing these issues will significantly enhance the overall quality and contribution of the paper.

This fictional reviewer report is designed to highlight common concerns in literature reviews and guide potential improvements in the paper.