Firstly, no research gap was identified in the text.

In my opinion, providing in the text the titles of publications on which the author based the literature review is unnecessary. At the beginning of a literature review, one or more introductory sentences are needed. References in the text need improvement.

There are no conclusions resulting from the study – according to the author, some of the companies are healthy, other no – what are the implications?

No comparison of the obtained results with the studies of other authors, which is recommended. There is no statistical analysis (even descriptive statistics) which is required in analytical papers.
