First, I would like to express my gratitude for being recommended to review the text. It is a highly important topic and of great interest to everyone studying neurodevelopment. Therefore, I share my considerations below to contribute to the improvement of the article.

1. Rewrite the summary as it is the same as the introduction paragraph. It is important in the summary to inform about the methodology in the study, report the main results, and summarize what was found.
2. The correct spelling is DSM-5, not DMS-V. And update to the new published edition of DSM-5, which would be DSM-5 TR.
3. Attach the table mentioned in the text, as I couldn't find Table 3 (no tables were there) mentioned in 5.1.
4. Although the references are at the end of the text, they must also be throughout the text to understand where the information was taken from.
5. In the introduction, write about the importance of reading your article, the proposed objective.
6. The methodology of the study carried out was not reported in the text.
