I enjoy reading the paper and I think that it addresses a very relevant topic. I'm not sure if the intention was to write a formal research paper. In any case, I think that the content is interesting enough to do so. I think that it would be necessary to define a clear research objective, state the originality of the knowledge generated and present a methodology that makes it possible to cope with the objectives. Maybe the writing should also be reviewed. I think that, with these formal improvements, the paper would be an appealing contribution to the research in the area.
