Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

It's a very interesting and necessary topic.

But the development is not clear enough and the text is rather repetitive.

In addition, it does not adequately explain the methodology of the study, which makes the results incomprehensible.

It also fails to maintain a balanced relationship between the parts, giving too much space to contextualization (Literature Review) and too little to discussion.

You should avoid phrases like "In this research paper, the researchers used a Mixed approach. The mixed research approach" where three "research" and two "mixed approach" appear and try to synthesize the discourse.

On the other hand, you should improve the presentation of the methodology as well as the results and the discussion.
