

Review of: "Aquaponics Unveiled: Efficient Household Farming"

Neha Nawandar¹

¹ Indian Institute of Technology Delhi

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper presents efficient household farming by means of an aquaponics system. However, there are a few things that I would like to point out in the paper. The authors briefly introduce the aquaponics background, followed by the components of the system and its working. There are sections explaining all the different functionalities. However, there are too many in number, which leads to confusion to link the work. The sections should be properly merged, and unnecessary ones should be removed. The paper presents a strong theory but fails to validate it, as there are no experimentation results in the paper. Implementation in an actual scenario will further strengthen the paper. Also, a spell check should be done. There is unnecessary usage of complex English words in the abstract. It leads to misinterpretation and twists the actual information and meaning of the sentence.