

Review of: "The Support and Rehabilitation of Refugees – Personal Opinion and Experience"

Kim Gerald Medallon¹

¹ University of Santo Tomas

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I really commend your work on supporting refugees. Congratulations too on your article!

Here are some suggestions:

The concept of rehabilitation may still be clearly defined in your article. Would it encompass all tenets of health or only some domains?

It is recommended that there would be a brief introduction of the concepts/content that you are going to present prior to the first subheading (Syria and Iraq).

Probably, per country/region, you may have write down salient points of your reflection after narrating what has happened there, along with the support you had extended. There may be then a final synthesis of all your reflections on the struggles, roles of other professionals/stakeholders, and need for support/rehabilitation of refugees toward the end of your article.

We may highlight the strengths of the refugees (e.g., maintaining their sense of purpose, resilience, etc.) in order for a final call toward an orchestrated support for them be made at the end of your article. These strengths when partnered with opportunities and support would pave the way for an increased level of quality of life among refugees. Such concept may also be highlighted in your article.