An interesting article discussing a recently described and rare entity with a diagnostic challenge, I have some concerns and recommendations for improving the scientific quality of this presentation; first, the article is mainly describing a histopathological hot topic but the title does not refer to pathology any how. Second, I realized that the author discussed the utility of using the immunohistochemical staining in differential diagnosis of syncytial myoepithelioma but if a summarizing table could be obtained for those markers it would be helpful. Last, I think you should refer to the cytokeratins and their expression in both myoepithelioma and syncytial myoepithelioma.
