Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

It is an excellent manuscript, well written and methodologically careful and appropriate to the established variables.

Writing about the state of mental health in the world has become a priority global health issue, so writings like this one must be disseminated.

The tables in the first two sections of results are somewhat difficult to read due to their length and distribution; they could be improved or another graphical way of presenting these results could be chosen.

It has a good methodological and theoretical basis.

I believe that it should be published as it is a topic of interest and relevance to help the population understand the current situation of mental illnesses.
