

Review of: "Saltwater Intrusion in Coastal Aquifers: A Comprehensive Review and Case Studies from Egypt"

Farzaneh Baghal Asghari

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This paper is well written, and in order to improve the paper and make it suitable for publishing, needs corrections:

The main purpose of the work, which distinguishes this article from other articles and has a role in attracting readers, has not been clearly stated. If you have a specific and innovative goal in presenting this article, please provide it.

Some of the contents presented in different sections of the paper are almost similar to other articles, and some sentences have been repeated in different ways. In order to make the article useful, these contents should be corrected and revised where necessary, according to different and new references in this area.

Case studies can be organized in different ways for better conclusions (combination, comparison); this part of the article can be more interesting and useful for the reader with a better review.

There are many sub-titles, and several of these topics can be merged in one place; these topics should be reviewed again.

Old references are seen in the article; use new and updated references in this area.