Thank you for the opportunity to give my view of the proposed article.

The topic is interesting and current and conceptually well connected areas.It is not clear from the call for review whether this is a professional or scientific article.In case that this is a scientific article, it is necessary to define in detail the basic elements of the paper: the objective of the research, research questions and the research methodology.

 It's not clear from the title what kind of transformation it is about (digital... or?).

The topic is very complex because on the one hand it connects the achievement of the sustainable development goals with technological development and with the ability of individuals to contribute to the preservation of resources, nature and the environment through their actions with the application of modern ICT solutions. Therefore, it is necessary to explore much more the interdependence between the areas you cite as areas of digital intelligence and the SDGs goals.

After all the results of detailed analyse must be presented in conclusion.
