well,

this article provides a well structured and informative content.

however, there are few points as revisions:

This article falls into book chapter category from my point of view since it elaborates generic and theoretical concept, therefore, this article is well-suited to be a book chapter rather than scientific article.

The construction of this article is good, but adding graphs and statistical analysis of the literature (for example, the progress of the research in AI) as graphs and tables will add much more visibility and clarity to the article.

Finally the overall impression of this article is good, since the topic has a high potential and impact on our life and it spot the light on a significant topic.

to share my own opinion on the article topic, I would say "we are reaching the age where a human touch is less appreciated and noticed, and people are moving to a "deepfake" reality rather than the true reality."
