1. An abstract should provide a concise summary of the key aspects of a research study, including its methodology.
2. Figure 1 is about the governance matrix and is not easily understood regarding the economic organization theory and how the Williamson theory mentions the effective transaction costs for workers. Certainly, please provide the paragraph you'd like to have rewritten to improve clarity of the issue you have in mind.
3. In the resource-linking perspective internal-external resource configuration, it is mentioned that Uber is the number one of car sharing services market in 2016. It might be better if the data given is the most recent data showing the real phenomenon.
4. Figure 2, the article effectively illustrates the various temporary advantages within the context of competition among players in the sharing economy. However, it is essential to clarify when exactly these advantages come into play, as indicated in Figure 2.
5. Regarding research question 1, it is important to specify who the incumbents are within the context of the sharing economy practices being researched. The article should clearly define these incumbent players to provide a more focused analysis of how sharing economy practices disrupt them.
6. For research question 2, the article seems to concentrate on comparing the strategies employed by the different sharing economy startups in managing competition among themselves. To enhance the clarity and depth of the analysis, it may be beneficial to explore how these disruptors navigate and compete in greater detail.
7. A well-structured conclusion should aim to provide answers or insights related to the research questions posed in the study. This helps readers understand how the research has contributed to addressing the stated objective and provides a clear takeaway from the study.
