

Review of: "Ameliorating the Impact of Climate Variability on Pesticide Dynamics and Efficacy"

Carlos Madeira¹

¹ Bank for International Settlements

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I think the paper is really interesting and it is relevant for agricultural economics. I never thought that the global warming could induce so much difference in terms of the geographic expansion of different insects, pests and weeds. The authors' topic is original, since I think I had not read this before, although I had read about the expansion of different diseases spread by insects becoming more abundant in some areas due to warming.