I would like to thank the authors for their courage to make their manuscript revision process public.

Although I may repeat what has already been said, I need to point to a few major issues that need to be addressed before the manuscript can be considered for a proper publication:

1. Besides numerous grammatical mistakes and typos, the overall text could be better structured and rewritten for clarity.
2. The proper comparison should be made to the other studies on the subject (there are much more than the 5 papers mentioned).
3. The number of participants seems a bit too low to provide proper statistical analysis.
4. The data are quite subjective as the skin conditions were evaluated by the participants only (and not a dermatologist).

Besides, if WhatsApp groups have been used, could the participants know the reports of each other?
