The following are a few observations:

1. The author need not mention bank names. The name of the bank on the photograph should be blurred. This is to respect copyright and avoid infringement.
2. The methodology adopted for this study was not clearly stated.
3. Few statements require citation.
4. The author made a lot of statements in assumption.
5. Certain statements analyzing the photograph sounded like mere assumptions but not a true reflection of the situation. For instance, researchers should be mentioning for how long the people had waited and reporting the true situation of things, not assume or imply an interpretation of posture.
