Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1-The research question is not clearly defined and needs to be described more clearly to be understood.

2-What is your originality? what research gap is your work covered?

3-The abstract and conclusion sections should include numerical values to support the findings, rather than relying on relative values.

4- Additionally, the abstract and introduction should provide background on the topic, explain the gap in existing research that the work aims to address, describe the motivations and goals of the study, and outline the methods and techniques used.

5-The paper needs to be redesigned for technical reasons. It is difficult to understand as it is currently written.
