

Review of: "Willingness-to-pay for health insurance: A comparative study between formal and informal health-workers"

Shujaat Farooq¹

¹ Pakistan Institute of Development Economics

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The paper has attempted to analyze the willingness to pay for health insurance in Bangladesh where the analysis is carried out on formal and informal health workers. The following comments can improve the study:

1. One expects certain analysis and research on the health insurance market in Bangladesh in the introduction, author(s) should focus more on it rather than just focusing catastrophic health expenditures.
2. Conceptual framework is quite weak. it should be strengthen by both the demand and supply side factors rather than reflecting the variables related to.....
3. The write-up requires certain strengthen. There are lot of grammatical mistakes. for example, in the section "Study Duration and Period", author has mentioned that study will be conducted..
4. Data and methodology section is quite weak. there is no too much details on sampling framework and design of the study.
5. There are no results so I understand that it is a proposal and draft design of study.