

Review of: "Hanging on a Rope: The Current Triangular to Pentagonal Kinship Transformation in Simalungunese"

Bhakti Nur Avianto¹

¹ Universitas Nasional Jakarta

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Strengths of the article:

- The article provides a clear and concise overview of the transformation of kinship ties in Simalungunese society.
- The authors draw upon a rich body of anthropological literature to support their argument.
- The authors present their ethnographic data in a clear and compelling way.
- The authors make a significant contribution to the study of kinship.

Weaknesses of the article:

- The article could benefit from a more in-depth discussion of the limitations of classical anthropological theories.
- The authors could provide more detail about the methods they used to collect their data.
- The authors could discuss the implications of their findings for a wider audience.

Overall, this is a well-written and insightful article that makes a significant contribution to the study of kinship.