

Review of: "[Research Note] Long COVID in Mexico – Research Efforts"

María A. Samudio-Cruz¹

¹ Instituto Nacional de Rehabilitación

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article is a good effort to synthesize some of the studies that have been done in Mexico to understand this phenomenon and lay the groundwork for a future proposal for clinical guidelines, however, it does not include a formal definition of "long COVID", the method used for the review is not clearly described and the results would be worth adding the severity of the COVID and other variables such as vaccination status.

I believe that this article can become a systematic review and meta-analysis, which would provide much information to people who are interested in the subject.