Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

- As a research paper, it must make apparent the objectives, gaps, significance, and reasons for the value of the study. The Background performed a poor job of describing the pertinent research history and global scientific issues.
- More references must be added to the literature review in order to paint a complete picture of this investigation. The majority of the cited references are outdated.
- In the Discussion section, you can do a comparative study of the experimental results along with the findings of earlier studies by other scientists.
- Discussion section may use some improvement. Additionally, the reader could find it intriguing to see some outcomes.
