Knock-out

National Cancer Institute

Source

Inactivation of specific genes by homologous recombination. Knockouts are often created in laboratory organisms such as yeast or mice so that scientists can study the knockout organism as a model for a particular disease.