

Review of: "Young Builders vs. University of Delhi: A case of maintenance of balance between environment and development in housing development for the megacity of Delhi"

Pindo Tutuko<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Universitas Merdeka Malang

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This article is very interesting by discussing the review of environmental permit assessors and accountability in the environmental cleaning process in India. A balance is needed to ensure sustainable development in cities. This article also discusses the role of the courts that have the right to decide in favor of the environment, such as the capacity of the city's resources (air quality, water, traffic, and so on). There are several things that are highly recommended to improve this article especially the "Introduction" section which seems very short. The introduction contains things that reflect the background, problems, gaps, and motivations of a study. Indeed, there are issues that have arisen, but it is also necessary to state the statement of motivation desired by the author in the introduction including the methods and objectives of this study.