

Review of: "Online learning during the COVID-19 pandemic, lessons learned and what's next?"

Wissale Mahdaoui

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

It is such an interesting topic that is well-written in a detailed way, but even so, I would like to suggest some comments and minor changes that may increase the quality of the article.

1. The introduction part of the article is well-organized and effectively summarizes the main points of the article.
However, I think it would be useful to include a brief section on the methodology to support the information given.
2. The title and abstract should be more precise and concise; so that readers can understand the main objective of the study.

Overall, this paper is insightful and informative as it provides university students, teachers, and academicians with effective practices in online learning to achieve quality learning and the main challenges that students faced during the transition to online learning.