

Review of: "Sectoral GDP and Tax Revenue: a Panel Data Analysis"

DR.Snovia Naseem¹

¹ Jiangsu University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Sectoral GDP and Tax Revenue: a Panel Data Analysis

1. The abstract and introduction of the paper lack sufficient background and fail to clearly convey the significance of the study. Additionally, the paper's topic is inadequately addressed.
2. The introduction should explicitly outline the research questions and objectives, and provide justification for the study's importance. It should address the following questions: Why is the topic important? What are the specific research questions? What existing research has been conducted on the topic? What are the unique contributions of this study? Additionally, the introduction should provide an outline of the paper's structure.
3. While the paper offers policy recommendations based on the analysis and results, some of these recommendations lack depth and effectiveness. It would be beneficial for the authors to provide more detailed and comprehensive policy recommendations.
4. The paper should emphasize its contributions both in practical and academic terms, citing the most recent relevant literature to support its claims. This will help to situate the study within the current academic discourse and demonstrate its practical relevance.