

Review of: "Challenges of Learners with Disabilities in Open Schools in India"

Somaya El-Saadani¹

¹ Cairo University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Article: "Challenges of Learners with Disabilities in Open Schools in India"

Overall, the experimental design is good; however, the article needs considerable reorganization.

- The abstract is too extended. Therefore, it is better not to exceed 300 words (maximum).
- There is no page numbering, a matter that made it difficult to refer to the paragraphs in the article.
- There is a figure without a figure number (the first one) had the title "Some of the major factors that affect costs of Open and Distance Learning." However, unfortunately, the authors did not discuss or refer to it anywhere in the article.
- Section 5, "Statement of the problem," has only one statement about the study's objectives. Nothing is mentioned regarding the study problem.
- The authors could merge sections 4, 5, 6, and 7 into one section.
- It is not appropriate to write about the Institution in section: "9.Research methodology."

The figures related to the modified contents need to move to an appendix.