This is a nicely written article. It would be helpful though, if the terms diversity and inclusion were contextualized in the Indian highlighting, the groups that have been historically marginalized or have been marginalized now because of what reasons. Even if we are speaking of diversification of economy then even we need to see what do we mean by it exactly. Similarly, to clear links of the argument to higher education would also help in this diversification and inclusion and again what do we need to do for whom. Also is there anything that we need to do with the schooling that prepares students for the higher education. Is it inclusive and diversified if not what do we need to. This would make the argument stronger
