Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study is interesting, but lacks logic and needs to be revised.

Some suggestions are put forward, hoping to be useful to the author:

1. Find out the theoretical basis related to the research, and give the theoretical framework to facilitate readers to understand the logic of the article.
2. Literature should refer to classic academic works and papers, and pay attention to recent relevant achievements.
3. The research method is too general, so the research method and feasibility should be explained in detail, and the research process and method should be described in connection with the research problem.
4. The conclusion should make a comprehensive statement of the research problems, emphasize the problems solved by this research, point out the defects, and give suggestions for future research.
5. Academic papers should avoid too much subjective description and pay more attention to objective logic.
6. It's best to cite sources.
