

Review of: "The Role of Financial Literacy on Sustainable Development of Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs) in Africa"

Tijani F. Alhassan¹

¹ Moscow Polytechnic University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article looks at the role of financial literacy in facilitating MSMEs growth in Africa. The authors reviewed a lot of literature relevant to the study and the objective of the study was well established.

However, the authors failed to mention certain factors hindering the growth of these firms. Although access to finance is a major hindrance, however there are other indirect factors that cause the low access to finance. For example, high informal, lack of document for identification, etc reduce the ability of these individuals or firms to access loans, qualify for subsidies, and so on.

Also, the authors failed to explain how sustainable development was measured and what factors or elements were incorporated in their assessment of the dependent variable.

I would therefore suggest the authors take consideration of the above remarks as that would give a lot of clarity to readers.