

Review of: "Behavioral optimization in Scientific Publishing"

Tessa Pronk¹

¹ KWR Water Research Institute

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The first part of the article reads nicely and I can follow the reasoning. The second part, that holds the suggestion for an alternative way of publishing, reads as the opinion of the author, without embedding in facts or scientific literature. I would suggest that the author looks at publishing platforms where people can freely post information, and compares the level of confirmation bias in those with the expected one that is theorized.