Many of the references and, therefore, citations in the text are older than five years. The recommendation is to replace these references with more recent ones, of course, as far as possible, so that they are not older than five years.

Therefore, it is necessary to modify the text as well, so that it corresponds to the new bibliographic items.

I recommend reformulating the following phrase: "Phillips, Celeste R. (2003) mentioned that hospitals and healthcare organizations should support Family Centered Maternity Care (FCMC) rather than Staff Centered Maternity Care." It is enough to use only the superscript citation, not the author's name, given the fact that the item is very old. If you find a suitable recent one, no older than five years, I recommend replacing it and reformulating the phrase.
