

Review of: "Determinants of Internal Financing: Small and Medium Enterprises in Pakistan"

Azharsyah Ibrahim¹

¹ State Islamic University Ar-Raniry

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Here are some recommendations for improving the clarity, precision, and structure of your paper:

1. Clarity and Precision

The paper contains a high level of technical language and jargon without always defining terms or reasoning. This can limit the reader base to only those well versed in economic and financial jargon. Try to explain technical concepts in simple terms or provide a glossary of terms.

2. Pros and Cons

The article is remarkably objective in its investigation. However, it could benefit from a more explicit listing of the pros and cons, or advantages and disadvantages, of SMEs compared with larger businesses. This would aid the reader in understanding the issues at hand.

3. Clear subheadings

The structuring could be improved by introducing clear subheadings aimed at guiding the readers through the sections.

4. Figures and Graphs

More use of figures, graphs, or infographics could be made to represent data in a clear, digestible manner.

5. Concise Conclusion

The conclusion could be more concise, summarizing the main points in a punchier and tighter ending.

6. Proofreading

Ensure the manuscript is thoroughly proofread, as errors in grammar, punctuation, and syntax can diminish the overall quality and readability of the paper.