Dear Reviewer, The authors present an approach that, implicitly, aims to improve the comprehensiveness of care, considering the biopsychosocial model of health care. The idea seems to be original and important to disseminate to professionals in the field. However, to facilitate the replication of these practices, I make the following suggestions: - -

Detail the methodology used in the narrative process;

Describe the concept of death doula and differentiate it from other professional categories;

Make it clear which professionals can take this type of approach and what training they need to have to do so;

Increase the outcome items and impact on patients and families.
