The paper is pertinent to the subject. However, the authors may consider the following suggestions for better writing, especially to increase readers' reading experience:

- Abstract: Write one or two sentences of introduction on the issue to explain the need for the study.
- Introduction: Add some sentences to explain the issue/problem at the end of the paragraphs (before the objectives of the study).
- Empirical Review: Rather than explaining each study, it is highly recommended to synthesize all the empirical reviews. This should be discussed under Literature Review.
- Method: This is not a descriptive study since the second objective is to examine the effect of the study's variables. What is the software used for descriptive and inferential statistics?
- Discussion: The discussions provided are not sufficient. Add more discussions on the findings.
- Conclusion: It is recommended to add suggestions for future research.
- References: Lack of recent references to support the study.
