Article with an interesting approach.

The relationship between digital literacy and sustainable development is now subject of study, and this interest will undoubtedly be in the coming years.

Although in this text the author, we believe, perhaps, tries to make too broad an analysis, which prevents from going deeper into some concepts.

Encouraging the author to continue with this line of work, we would like to give them some tips for improvement the final text:

1. you should clearly indicate the objectives of the research, otherwise it just looks like a review work
2. it would also be very important to clarify the methodology used.
3. if the author refers about a concrete "project", it could necessary specify which one, and give the lectors more information
4. expand the review of concepts such as sustainable development, and even the sustainable development goals.
5. it would be a good idea to introduce a discussion section, where the review of other works is analysed, and improve the conclusions.

Go ahead.
