Review of: "Zad's 4-Dimensional Model of the Self: An Integrative Conceptualisation"

I thought adding the vignettes to the paper really applies the 4-D model quite well and allows the reader to better understand its concepts within an applied context. I think adding a component on culture in relation to the vignettes would add more depth to the 4-D model itself and reinforce some of the discussions surrounding culture throughout the paper. There was a brief mention of cognitive distortions in the paper regarding the vignettes: one way to integrate culture is to discuss the interplay between relevant identities and symptomatology.
