Generally, the article was well-structured. The methodology is explained clearly. The weak points of the study is the limited explanations of the authors to some of the provided information. First, there wasn't enough elaboration on the differences between the two locations in the study. Second, the explanation of the limitations of the study was limited, and the effects of these limitations were only briefly explained. Finally, I didn't see a strong association between the results and the conclusion, although the findings suggests more points to conclude.
