Although the topic of the study is interesting, little effort has been done to be an academic study. An academic study needs some required parts. This includes a brief introduction of the topic, a thorough review of the studies done before your research, a presentation of the methods and materials used in the study, a discussion on the results of applying the methods on the datasets, and a conclusion from the results. Currently, your paper fundamentally lacks the major parts.

In regards of the figures, you can use GIS tools and software to draw interesting maps. Of course, you need the spatial datasets to feed the software. In addition, try to present the results in other forms such as tables.
