Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Preserving a culture characterized by social cohesion is important because it also helps to maintain the cultural identity of the members of that community, in addition to supporting their psychological health. Hence the value of the text, even if the religious theme is not of personal interest.

It deepens the sense of belonging of the members of these communities. There is a hint about their form of organization, but it is not possible to get a complete idea about it. I recommend going deeper into this category of analysis (forms of participation, hierarchical or symmetrical organization).

Methodologically, it would be useful to add more detail in terms of the data base (such as which documents were reviewed, how many interviews were conducted, with whom, etc.). ) The form of analysis (what qualitative perspective guided the process, if any software was used, etc.).
