

Review of: "Lived Experience of School Leaders in Supervising during Remote Teaching"

Teresa Crew¹

¹ Bangor University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This is an interesting piece of research on the pandemic which will be useful to school leaders with regards to remote learning. It's especially interesting and thought provoking because it is based on the Philippines. I found all sections well thought through. I

Recommendations

- more detailed description of methodology and I agree with previous researcher that more needs to be written on the data analysis.
- Much more literature needs to be included. For instance I have an article that might be of interest: Crew, T and Märtins, T. (2023). Students' views and experiences of blended learning and employability in a post-pandemic context, Social Sciences & Humanities Open, 8 (1). Also, I'd recommend you conduct a literature review
- I'd like to see more discussion of the Philippines. It's a very interesting case study, but I don't get a sense of what does the case study of this country extend the research field?

Overall a great piece of work, just a bit more work, especially an understanding of the literature